Dear Marketing Enthusiasts,

Welcome back to the Future Marketers Association Monthly Newsletter!

This Edition, we delve into “Behind Every Purchase - How Research Uncovers the Hidden Mind of the Consumer,” a theme that highlights the critical role of insight, analysis, and understanding in shaping modern marketing decisions. In today's world, consumer choices are shaped by psychological, social, and digital factors. Research helps us understand what drives purchasing behavior.

In This Month's Impact Marketer...

Expert’s Corner

A quick stop at a neighborhood supermarket in Kelaniya can reveal more than shelves of products. It tells a story. A consumer hesitates between two brands of rice, checks the price twice, and finally reaches for the one she trusts. In that brief moment lies a powerful insight. A hidden mix of emotion, experience, and external reality drives every purchase. In Sri Lanka, this hidden decision-making process has become even more complex in recent years. Economic uncertainty, inflation, and supply chain disruptions have reshaped how consumers think, prioritise, and act. Price sensitivity has increased. However, trust and perceived value remain equally critical drivers (Dissanayake & Ismail, 2022). Consumers are no longer simply buying products. They are managing risks, seeking reliability, and adapting to uncertainty.

The Success Trial

The greatest lesson from DMM wasn't just the core theories; it was the focus on the "strategist" mindset. They didn't just teach us to memorize; they taught us to integrate, implanting the notion in our minds that marketing isn't just about selling a product; it's something beyond that, such as understanding human psychology and solving problems. Our lecturers pushed us to look beyond the textbook and into industry realities, and forced us to defend our strategies in presentations. That "defensibility" is something I use every single day when presenting to clients.
